FAT AND THIN.

Contrasting and Curious Ideas on the Development of Adipose Tissue.

To the student of ethnology few things are more interesting than the different views held by the Eastern and Western worlds on the subject of corpulence.

In China, corpulence is considered to be one of the most important qualifications for the holding of any public office. It is regarded as a physical virtue which imparts dignity to the appearance, weight to the judgment, and solidity to the mind.

In China the thin man is always moody and disappointed, he sees himself easily outstripped in the race of life by his stouter contemporaries, and is enraged at the unjust distribution of nature's gifts, he retires usually into obscurity, and shuns the gaze of his fellow-citizens.

Exacting, except as a punishment for great criminals, is unknown in China. The most popular gods in the Chinese Pantheon are those remarkable for their obesity.

With us in Europe how different it is! Daniel Lambert, whom the Chinese would have sent to a province as a mandarin, we sent to a museum as a monstrosity.

Byron's tendency to grow fat was one of the secrets of his melancholy, and the declining years of the first gentleman in Europe were rendered miserable by that stoutness which even stags could not conceal.

It is true that Shakespeare intended Hamlet to be fat, feeling probably that it would be characteristic of such a lethargic nature, but modern audiences are not ready to accept fat Hamlets; they prefer thin Hamlets, and even lean Hamlets, and seem to be of opinion that there is an artistic discord between romance and rotundity.

And indeed it cannot be doubted that this opinion is very widespread. The only instance to the contrary that we know of is in the case of a lady who, on being shown the Apollo Belvidere, remarked that she preferred "stouter statues;" but this lady was from Chicago.—[Fall Mail Gazette.

The Mad Dog Scare.
The old recipe of "a hair of the dog that bit you" was almost literally realized in a prescription for the cure of hydrophobia much in vogue with the "Fasters" of the fifteenth century.

"Take a mastiff pup of a month old, and stuff the same with cloves, cinnamon, and divers other spices, and thereafter boil the carcass entire, the which, taken warm from the pot and laid into the path that hath been bitten, will without doubt do much good," which, somehow or other, it did not.

A more primitive but more successful method was employed within the memory of living men in a remote part of Ireland, the patient being the eldest son of the family, a fine lad of 13.

His recovery appearing hopeless from the strong symptoms of hydrophobia which he exhibited, the doctors decided upon bleeding him to death as the only alternative to the barbarous plan of smothering under a feather bed, which was then common.

A vein was opened, and he was locked into an outhouse, and left to die. But toward evening the milkmaid of the household, passing near the spot with her pail, was amazed to hear the sufferer's voice faintly asking for "something to drink."

Overpowered at this unmistakable sign of recovery, she lost no time in summoning assistance, and the young man's life was saved, the physicians ascribing his extraordinary escape to the carrying off of the poison by the copious flow of blood.

A Gold-Eating Goose.
And the great excitement caused in the nation over the recent discovery of gold, it now happens that fuel is to be added to the flames by a Mr. Nevels who, while dressing a goose, several particles of pure gold in its craw.

The goose was one of a pair that Mr. Walter Nevels, a substantial citizen of Lewis County, had recently brought from Oregon and placed on his ranch here.

Subscribers who do not receive the GAZETTE promptly will confer a favor by letting this office know at the earliest possible moment. All papers are carefully done up in wrappers, plainly marked, and mailed regularly.

THE manuscript of the following is reproduced in the December Century. It is the final paragraph of a fragment by Mr. Beecher, giving an account of his visit to England during the war. This is believed to have been the last piece of writing by Mr. Beecher: "A more pathetic example of the heroism of the poor was never exhibited than in the case of the Lancashire weavers. They saw their industries wasting, the bread grew scarce, even their poverty became poorer, nor was there any sign on the horizon that this cloud would soon pass away, and yet they held fast their integrity; and, believing that the cause of the North was the cause of the day laborer the world over, they patiently bore famine and distress with fortitude till the day dawned. No other men among all English-speaking people gave a testimony of the love of liberty so heroic and so pathetic as the weavers of Lancashire."

In the predictions in regard to the men whom General Harrison will select for his cabinet, entirely too much is said of the good work done for the party as the prevailing reason for their appointment regardless of their qualification for the position. This is really an indirect method of purchasing a position. Men, especially for cabinet positions and other responsible offices, should be selected more especially for their eminent qualifications rather than to pay a debt due. We confidently believe that, as a general rule, the president-elect will make his selections upon these principles, and if he does, his administration will be much more likely to be successful, and become a credit to himself and his party.

THE Elko Independent charges that a member of the Democratic State Central Committee of that county voted for Harrison. Does the Independent think for a moment that such protection Democrats as Samuel J. Randall voted for Cleveland? Washoe county contains several Democrats who could not and did not swallow the free-trade and single standard heresies of the present administration.

RENO cabinet makers are still at work to get Senator Jones a place in President Harrison's Cabinet. The subject under consideration now is whether they will give him the Secretary of the Treasury or the Secretary of the Interior. Warner Miller stands in the way of the State to give Jones the Treasury portfolio, and knowing ones have selected him for the Interior Department.

Mrs. Sherman's Funeral.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 1.—At an early hour this morning the friends of the late Mrs. General Sherman began to assemble at the Union Depot to receive the funeral party. The train entered the depot at 7:45. The special car was detached, and the friends of the family entered and paid their respects to the mourners. After breakfasting at the depot, the funeral party returned to their private car and remained until time for the funeral cortege to move. The pall bearers were Major-General John Pope, Brigadier-General John G. Henderson, General John W. Noble, Mayor Henry Hitchcock, James Yeatman, F. A. Drew, Theo. Polus Patin and D. R. Francis. There were two wagonloads of floral offerings at the house where the coffin was placed therein. The funeral party entered carriages at the entrance of the depot, and the cortege proceeded to St. Xavier's Church. At the church the casket was borne to the altar, where the bier, with Candelabras at the head and foot, had been placed to receive it. The church was crowded, and when the family and relatives were seated, Rev. Father Brongest began the celebration of mass, in accordance with the request of the deceased. The celebration of mass was followed by the simple service for the dead, and no sermon was preached. The music was the ordinary accompaniment for such service. The church was heavily draped. At the conclusion of the brief services, the casket was returned to the hearse, and the cortege proceeded to Calvary Cemetery, where the services at the grave were brief and simple.

Overland Freight Rates.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The transcontinental representatives yesterday further considered the proposed revision of the Pacific Coast freight tariffs. The question of grading rates, or in other words, making the rates from Chicago eighty per cent. of the rates from New York, took up most of the time. The representatives of the Rock Island and Burlington tried hard to obtain a concession, but General Traffic manager Stubbs of the Southern Pacific strongly opposed the proposition and showed that the present method of making the rates from all points to the Missouri river the same as from New York, was rather for the benefit of Chicago than otherwise, and he could not comprehend why the representatives of the Chicago lines are trying to bring about the adoption of the graded system. The latter, if adopted, he said, must be general; that under that system St. Louis, Omaha, Kansas City and all manufacturing points west of Chicago would be entitled to lower rates than Chicago; but by adopting a flat rate from all points east of the Missouri river, Chicago would be on an exact equality with St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and the more westerly points, in which event Chicago's unequalled facilities would give it command of the situation. Its competition was not New York or New England, but the business centers west of Chicago. The present rates are certainly low enough and satisfactory to shippers, a Le had heard no complaints and did not think the Chicago people desired to have the graded system adopted. It would give western competition a material advantage in rates.

Would Not Retract.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—In the House of Commons to-day the Speaker ordered E. Graham to withdraw from the House, because he accused Smith the Government leader, of conniving at a dishonorable trick, and refused to retract the accusation. As Mr. Graham was leaving the House, a member shouted, "Bravo, Graham!"

In an interview Graham explained that the trouble arose over the action of Brooke Robinson (Conservative), in putting a motion on paper to prevent a discussion upon the chainmakers' grievances. Graham characterized this as a dishonorable trick, and expressed the belief that the Government instigated Robinson to perform it. He refused to withdraw this statement, hence his dismissal. Graham says he will not apologize, no matter what the result may be.

A Monster Railroad Trust.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The Government Directors of the Union Pacific R. R. in their annual report to the Secretary of the Interior for 1888, say they have assumed as a premise to show beyond the scope of discussion, the necessity of an adjustment between the Government and the railroad company for the payment of the funds heretofore advanced as subsidy for the building of the road. Those monies will be due, says the report, by the terms of the agreement between the parties, in a few years, and it is manifest that the road is not now, and will not then be, in a condition to satisfy its obligations. It is equally manifest that such an adjustment not be affected, the Government will be compelled to take possession of the road and operate it, a result so full of dangerous embarrassments and difficulties should not be allowed to enter into the discussion, except as a last and unavoidable solution of a problem not otherwise to be solved. The Government Directors are still of the opinion that it will be better for the United States to lose every dollar of its debt, and execute a release to the company than to undertake the duties of a common carrier of goods and passengers, thereby establishing a precedent which would surely create mischief, for beyond the benefits to be reaped from so hazardous an experiment. It must be clear too, says the report, that every year that is allowed to pass without the liquidation and settlement of the debt, it will increase to a serious extent the difficulties of the situation. The debtor company is necessarily under a disadvantage, compared with its unfettered rivals; it owes a large debt to the supreme power of the land. It cannot deal at arm's length with its creditor, for the ordinary considerations that operate as between individuals or corporations, do not apply when the settlement is finally to be made. The questions between the company and the Government are to be passed upon and determined by a large body of men coming from different parts of the country, actuated it may be in some instances by honest prejudice, founded upon imperfect knowledge or a distorted representation of facts, or not unfrequently by a conviction that some puritory measure should be adopted against corporations, even at the risk of diminishing their ability to respond. That body of men meet only at intervals, and its attention is generally engrossed with other more important subjects, upon which legislation is urgently demanded. These and other elements of uncertainty embarrass the movements of the company, and paralyze its freedom of action. It is as important to the Government as to the company, says the report, that all necessary liberty should be given the managers of the corporation to develop the resources upon which the future solvency of the road must depend. It is not possible, it says, that a railway company, situated as the Union Pacific, shall remain any considerable length of time in the same condition. It must move in one direction or another; it must improve or deteriorate. The Government directors assume that some settlement should be made, and commend the conclusions of the majority report of the Commission appointed under the Act of March 3, 1887, as sound, judicious and practical, and they earnestly hope they will meet with the approval of Congress.

Optim Smuggling Case.

AUBURN, N. Y., Dec. 1.—At the opening of the United States Court this morning Judge Brundage summed up for Haines in the opium smuggling conspiracy case. The great weight of his argument was his denunciation of lawyer Stone of Ogdensburg, who turned State's evidence, and in a eulogy of Haines' good character. He closed by endeavoring to show the absurdity of Haines' engaging in any such plot, urging the jury not to give any weight to the testimony of a perjured villain. United States Attorney Lockwood followed for the Government, carefully reviewing the testimony upon which he asked for a conviction of the defendant. The jury then retired, and is still out.

Irwin A. Gardner was this afternoon sentenced to four years in the Erie penitentiary and fined $10,000 for smuggling opium.

Federal Appointments—Death of Admiral Simpson.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The President has appointed John G. Conright of Michigan as Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and Charles E. Vandever of Indiana as Indian Agent at the Navajo Agency, New Mexico. Rear Admiral Edward Simpson of the United States navy (retired) died this morning in this city.

Sherman on Canadian Annexation.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—In an interview with the Sun's Washington correspondent, Senator Sherman, speaking of a union between Canada and the United States, said: "My belief in the future common destiny of the two English speaking nations of America has never wavered. I was led to form it by my failure to find a less radical remedy for the perennial occasions of serious disputes between the two countries. The fisheries dispute and the question of the right of the free transit of American goods over Canadian Railroads are a type of the disputes that have vexed the two nations for a century, and will continue to disturb them so long as the present conditions exist. To get rid of these questions we must get rid of the frontier. I studied the proposal for commercial reciprocity, only to be convinced that it was illusory and impracticable. The political union is another thing, and the advantages it offers are more equal. The political advantages of a union are emphasized by the present troubles over the fisheries, railroads and canal tolls. These and other occasions of border dispute would be removed, and the most grave provocative of dispute and irritation taken out of our diplomatic relations."

Closely Contested.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Nothing unusual occurred at Madison Square during the night. The most of the walkers spent nearly all the time on the track. At 6 A. M. Littlewood had 559 miles, or 6 miles ahead of Albert's record for the same number of hours. At 7 o'clock the Englishman also eclipsed Hazelt's record of 563 miles and 5 laps, in 127 hours. At 6 o'clock Herty was 16 miles. At 6 o'clock Littlewood, and at 7 o'clock he was 18 miles 3 laps behind. Sporting men are unanimous in the opinion that the present race has been the most hotly contested on record, particularly between Herty and Littlewood, both of whom still exhibit a great determination, dogging each other incessantly. At 11 o'clock Littlewood has 584 miles, Herty 560, Moore 528, Cartwright 511, Noremack 504, Hart 502, Howarth 498, Mason 491, Golden 492, Connor 500.

At 2 P. M. Littlewood was 6 miles 6 laps ahead of the previous world's record of 585 miles 2 laps.

A Strong Intimation.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—Bishop O'Dwyer of Limerick, has intimated that unless the boycotting of a man named Ryan, for taking the lands of the evicted, shall cease, he will close the church of the parish in which the farm is located, suspend all masses, sacraments and burials. Sexton has been re-elected Lord Mayor of Dublin.

Suddenly Disappeared.

A wagon loaded with giant powder became stuck in the mud near Nigger Wells, Maricopa county, A. T., Wednesday. The driver unloaded the boxes, placed them on the side of the road and drove a short distance ahead, when a teamster following, noticed a coyote examining the boxes, and not knowing what they contained, fired at the animal. The ball struck a box and a terrific explosion followed. Fortunately no one was hurt, but the coyote disappeared with the explosion.

Hall's Hair Renewer.

Hall's Hair Renewer restores gray hair to its original color; makes the scalp white and clean; cures dandruff and humors; prevents the hair from falling out, and renders it soft and brilliant. The editor of the "Queen Bee," Cape May, writes: "We speak knowingly, when we assert that Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is the best of its kind. The article is an elegant and cleanly one, without which we think no toilet complete." Thos. D. Jones, Middle Granville, N. Y., writes: "I have used

The advance of time is heralded by bleached, thin, and falling hair. By the use of Hall's Hair Renewer, the hair may be restored to its original color, lustre, and vitality. M. N. Johnson, Fitchburg, Mass., writes: "My hair was weak, thin, and full of dandruff. Hall's Hair Renewer has removed the dandruff, and caused a vigorous growth of new hair." Abel H. Smith, Portsmouth, Va., writes: "My hair had nearly all fallen out, and that which was left was dry and dead. I used one bottle of Hall's Hair and now rejoice in the possession of hair as abundant as ever." E. J. Adams, St. Paul, Minn., writes: "A diseased scalp caused my hair to fall out, and after using a number of preparations without avail, I finally tried Hall's Hair Renewer, which caused a vigorous new growth. I am still using it, and could ask for no better results." Mrs. R. H. Corning, Battle Creek, Mich., writes: "By the use of Hall's Hair Renewer, my head, which was quite bald, has been covered with a fine growth of young hair."

"LITTLE DEDE"

We call her "Little Dede." By me, I mean her mamma and I, who are her father, and the friends who know her best. Her right name is Edith, but when she was two years old she gave us her baby version of "Little Dede," and we have called her by the name of her own making ever since. She lives in New York, where she was born.

"Little Dede" is four years old now, and she is very proud of telling folks so. She says very bright things sometimes, and this is the reason why I now tell the boys and girls some of the little speeches she has made.

One day quite a long time ago, she was more quiet than usual, and I missed her baby-singing.

On one occasion when the letterman brought a paper for me, "Little Dede" said:

"Let me take the skin off, papa."

That was a busy time for "Little Dede's" eyes when the doctor came to vaccinate the baby, and she watched him very closely as he scratched the dear fat leg with his sharp lancet. When he had gone she looked all around, and then asked:

"Did the doctor take his blood-picker with him?"

She was two years and a quarter old when taken on a visit to England. While there she lived in a big town, and one day was missed for hours. People went every way to find her. Her cousin Eddie met with her quite a long way off. What do you think she was doing? She was at an open-air meeting of the Salvation Army, her dear little head uncovered from the light rain that was falling, and listening with all her might, her doll hanging limply over her arm, to the worship. The Army folks had a band, drums and clashing symbols and noisy brass horns, and hearing them pass, the little witch had slipped out and followed them. Very glad was dear Eddie to find her, but he said, as if much hurt that she had run away:

"Oh, Dede! Why did you run away?"

"I wanted to hear the music, Eddie," said "Little Dede" quietly.

I cannot say that my treasure is always a good girl. Her mamma sometimes talks to her about her naughty doings, and I am afraid the little culprit is ready as a lawyer to defend herself.

One day her mother, speaking of some pretty little girls at a window on the opposite side of the street, said how good they were.

"So should I be, ma, if I lived there."

Nor is "Little Dede" always as proper in what she says to older folks as I desire her to be.

After her nurse had put her to bed one night, that grave person was overheard to rattle her. In a tone of high scorn the youngster replied:

"Don't you talk to me."

"Won't you give me your pretty curls?"

He was a large, fat person—his head ever so big.

Looking up at him, "Little Dede" spoke:

"Your head is too large and fat for my curls."

The funniest thing about my little sweetheart is that she speaks quite seriously even when her words seem to be part; and there are times when she talks about God and heaven so sweetly that her silly papa thinks she is the best and wisest minister he ever heard.

She has just left him, and is sleeping in her crib near by. Ten minutes ago she had her arm round my neck and was saying:

"Papa, I love you. I love you all the day and when the moon shines. I love you all the time, papa, dear. Me kiss you good-night."

And the tiny angel in her night robe slipped off my knee to be placed in her own little bed.

May God spare to us our "Little Dede." We dare not think what our home would be without her.—[P. A.]

A Disgraced Juror.

"Squ," said he, "jest listen to me a minute, if you please. I recognize the fact that I have made a big mistake. I come here an' hung round tryin' to git on the jury, an' at last I got that."

"Well, what is the matter with you?" the judge demanded.

"I'm comin' to that. I got that, as I told you, an' we lit into business. I thought that I would hear all about how fellows got killed, an' how somebody was murdered, an' I thought that we'd say some fellow was guilty an' would see him hung, but I was disappointed."

"Here come a lot o' cases about fellows removin' mortgaged cotton, an' all about Mr. So-and-So suin' 'bout killin' nor nothin' interestin' yit."

"I am a powerful hand for fun, judge, an' I never could get a case of nothin' interestin' yit."

"I want to hear suthin' that'll make my hair stand up on end."

"I thought that a juryman had a fine time. I thought that with him it was a regular show, but as I told you, I've been deceived."

"Wy, I mout stay here a month foolin' with sich stuff, an' even then wouldn't have nothin' ter tell the boys when I got home, so, judge, ef yer don't give me a case of hang a fellow, I'll have to jog 'long towards home."—[Arkansas Traveler.]

Emerson's Study.

Ralph Waldo Emerson's study in the pleasant old Concord residence is kept just as the sage and poet left it.

Over the low mantel hangs a fine copy of Michael Angelo's "Fates." There is a curious old Egyptian idol, choice engravings, a wall, and a set of celebrated men here and there about the room.

On either side of the fireplace two doors open into the sunny south parlor.

On one side, the little blotting pad with sheets of paper, and by it a pen and an ink bottle.

The Passion for Betting.

Years ago when riding with the late Rev. Dr. Ballard he remarked to us that he "didn't like cards, so much gambling was done with them."

We replied:

"Doctor, we have just left the office and almost the last paragraph which we read was in relation to two young fellows about to attend church service, the men stopping at the door and making a bet upon the length of the sermon to be delivered."—[Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph.]

A LIQUID DETECTIVE.

Has Many a Good Game With a Man He Was Sent to Find, and Fails to Recognize Him.

Some time ago a confidential clerk in the employ of a firm in Indiana skipped the gutter with several thousand dollars in ready cash. While it was determined to hunt him down at all hazards, the firm did not feel like wasting a great deal of money in so doing.

A one-horse country detective was therefore employed, and after a while he traced the man to Detroit. The detective didn't propose to share any of the glory with the Detroit officers, and he slid around for a week before he learned that his man was in Windsor.

Then he went over there, still working on the quiet, and a nice young man at one of the hotels informed him that the defaulter had just gone to Toronto, but would be back in a few days.

The pair became fast friends, and the nice young man had his daily drinks and cigars at the detective's expense.

The two came over to Detroit and attended the theater and had good times.

"Yes, I know," was the placid reply.

"William Green!"

"Yes, certainly! What are you going to do about it?" calmly replied the nice young man, as he lighted another fifteen-center.—[Detroit Free Press.]

A good story is told of a little girl, whose mother is a member of Bosworth Relief Corps, which goes to show that even at her tender age she is smart enough to run a fair.

The little miss is only nine years old. She is very pretty and lady-like.

When the Relief Corps decided to hold a fair the ladies, as is customary, asked the friends to contribute articles to their various tables.

Now, our little miss thought she would do business on her own hook. So she called on many ladies she knew, interested them in the fair, and when it was time to open the fair this little miss had secured so much and of such variety that a cart had to be sent to collect the contributions.

This little miss was very attentive during the fair. One evening Mayor Deering came into the hall. The young lady bowed up to him and said:

"Mayor Deering, I am collecting some money for the fair; won't you contribute?"

The Mayor put his hand in his pocket, took out some money, and, without looking at it, handed it to the little miss. She thanked him and went off, but in a few moments was back again.

"Mayor Deering, I forgot to tell you that we proposed to print the names of those contributing the money I am collecting, and when you gave me some money you didn't stop to look at it, and I thought you ought to know that you gave me seven cents, because I didn't believe you would wait it printed that the Mayor of Portland gave seven cents to the fair."

A broad smile overspread the Mayor's face, and drawing his pocket-book, he handed the little miss a scrip $5 bill.

"Now," says our little miss, "I hear Governor Robie is here, Mr. Mayor, and I would like ever so much to be introduced. Won't you introduce me?"

So the couple walked up to where the Governor was, and the Mayor addressing him said:

"Governor, here is a little girl who is very anxious to know the chief magistrate of the State."

The Governor turned, shook hands with our little miss, asked her name, patted her head and asked her what she could do for her.

"Why, Governor Robie," she replied, "I am collecting some money for the fair. Won't you contribute?"

"Of course, I will," replied the Governor, "what shall I give you?"

"Well, you see," said our little miss, "Mayor Deering has given me $5, and of course the Governor of a State would wish to give more than the mayor of a city."

The Governor was quick to see the joke, and laughingly drew his wallet and our little miss a bill to add to the other contributions for the relief fund.—[Portland (Me) Press.]

MONEY AND MATRIMONY.

The Frankly Expressed Views of a Wife on the Connection of These Two Things.

I am certain that money, or, rather, the want of it, is at the root of most failures in marriage. We have everything to make us happy but that, and I can assure you it is an evil of no mean growth or limited influence.

My husband is a soldier, and one of the very best and truest gentlemen on God's earth. This wife, and in many ways a very good one, for I combine intense economy with really good appearances (as far as they go), and I work very hard, and yet hold my own among the "society" people to whom we belong.

But, oh! if you had any idea of the "drive" that it is to do this. The struggle, I feel, is spelling me. I am so cantankerous at home, so full of cares, so impatient and snappish, so annoyed at the smallest waste of money, that I am, I know it, often unbearable to my good man.

He would often settle the question, I feel, and let me live alone if we didn't love each other and the child so dearly.

"Why not?" asked Descartes. "Do you really imagine that Providence intended the good things of this earth only for the foolish and ignorant?"

"Labor Useful and Ornamental."

In New York women make 12 cents a day crocheting shawls.

This is a shameful condition of things; and yet in this same city there are young women who paint faces and hammer brass, and don't make 12 cents a week.

And yet they don't complain—but their parents do.—[Norristown Herald.]

FIBBING CUSTOMERS.

"I want it for a friend," he said, blushing like a young girl and looking very uncomfortable.

It was in a Pittsburgh jewelry store, and the unhappy youth with the red cheeks was asking for a wedding ring.

He had a little bit of silk between his finger and thumb, and he repeated nervously to the polite gentleman behind the counter, "I want it for a friend—this is the measurement."

Luckily it does not require long to choose a wedding ring. There is not much variety in the plain, little gold bands which are the outward and visible signs of the matrimonial bonds.

The young man chose a ring, it was shut up in a sweet, little velvet-lined box, and the prospective bridegroom hurried away.

An old fable, a fiction that almost every man who buys a wedding ring employs," said the jeweler as the customer disappeared.

"Of course he is the man who will put that ring on the finger of the bride, but he says he wants it for a friend. There are plenty of other white lies told out of this counter. Some behind it you say?"

"I dare say, but a tradesman's lies about his wares are explainable if not excusable on business grounds, while some of the lies of our customers are fantastic fictions that one cannot account for on any theory at all."

"Bashfulness, of course, impels the youth to proclaim that the engagement or wedding ring is not for him. But I have customers who tell lies deliberately, and, so far as I can see, unnecessarily."

"For example, there is a resident of this city, wealthy and wise, and, if persistent, fabrication makes him so wicked. He is fond of jewelry, and has good taste. Solitaire rings are his favorite."

"One day in almost every month he rushes into the store, knocks over a stool or two, perhaps scares some lady customer nearly to death, and makes me instinctively reach for my revolver. Then he gasps out, 'I want to see some diamond rings—awful hurry—catch train—start for Washington—half hour!'"

"This spasm generally lasts two minutes. Afterward he settles quietly down and perhaps spends an hour looking at diamonds. He never varies his formula, is always just on the point of going to Washington, and I happen to know he never goes."

"A remarkable romance comes from a good family."

"She is a widow and has money, and I often wonder she does not find a mate again, she is so pretty. At intervals she comes and weaves a pretty story for my benefit. There is a variety about her fits which makes them charming. They are as ingenious as they are unaccountable."

"A month ago she came with her little girl. She has some magnificent diamonds—the handsomest stones and the best cut of any I have seen in Pittsburgh. They were in her ears when she entered the store."

"Mr. —, I want you to take these earrings," she said, putting them down before me, "and make the settings lighter; they are too heavy and my doctor says such a strain upon the lobe of the ear is very injurious."

"The setting could not well have been made lighter—a mere cobweb filigree. I knew my customer too well to tell her so. I took the earrings and did have some of the gold taken away, and sent them back to her."

"Yesterday she came again and told me that somebody had advised her to have the diamonds more securely set in her earrings. She wanted them almost wrapped in gold network. They are being so treated now."

"You will hardly believe me when I tell you that in the last few years I have set and reset those diamonds twenty times, and every time my lady has had a new reason for making the change. Why she should object to knowledge that she is proud and fond of her diamonds is more than I can see."

"I could multiply these instances of habitual mendacity by ten without encroaching upon the ranks of the cranks pure and simple with whom every tradesman is more or less acquainted. I don't wonder at customers' stories any more; I make it a rule never to believe them."—[Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegram.]

THE OLD BROWN DRESS.

My old brown dress, my old brown dress,

You're past the days of usefulness; And I remember with a sigh

How fast the days and years go by. You've been a friend so tried and true, It is so long since you were new.

You've many wrongs, but no redress; You've learned (like many more, no doubt)

To always wear your "best side out." But now, alas! 'tis all in vain; You'll bask in sunshine ne'er again;

A varied life you've had, old dress, For many times you've gone to press. Been mended, turned and ripped apart, Have known the sallow dressmaker's art.

And once you dyed, but looked so new That no one near me knew 't was you, While oblivious you "laughed in four sleeves"

To see how color could deceive.

Dear old brown dress, dear old brown dress,

I smooth your folds with tenderness, So much has happened since the time I wore you in your lustrous prime.

The treasured friends who know me well Have passed beyond "our mortal ken."

How long I've worn you! 12 cents a piece, Their hearts are cold, their lips are dumb.

And now good-bye, old threadbare dress, How long I've worn you! 12 cents a piece, You'll now be laid upon the shelf, Just as I soon must be myself.

The human stream is deep and wide— And yet I know what'er befall A watchful Father sees it all.
